Hello, vacation!

On February 5, 2018, the children of The Saturday School of AGBU Plovdiv Chapter faced a new challenge.

The first initiative, organized by AGBU Plovdiv Chapter at the beginning of the year - skiing school for children from the Saturday School of AGBU Plovdiv Chapter pursued two purposes:

- Bring children closer to nature for health and sports habits

-Shape children's collective thinking and to create new, real ones challenges.

At the very heart of the Rhodopes mountain, at 1600 meters above sea level, the snowy run expected the small skiers. With ski equipment and good mood, the kids embarked on this new adventure.

The instructors divided the group to advance and beginners. The First Brave - Marina Dervavahanian, Sarkis Kochian, Danny Hayrapetyan, and the six-year-old Verginia Nurikian, with the greatest experience in skiing, were ready to fly to the far end of the track.

At that time, the rest of the children were learning the basic ski movements, following the instructions of their ski teacher and practicing on site.

After an hour and a half, now more confident, the children were eager to go down the runway, in a row, keeping track and distance. They began to descend after their own teacher, Martin Voyvodov, followed his movements, reached the tow and slid again down the steep slope.

It was our satisfaction that we were able to give our children that special day, to spend in nature, away from the polluted urban air and the occupying electronic games, phones or computers.
